

Dear Whom It May Concern.

I am Sunnie Lee Watson, faculty in Learning Design and Technology at Purdue University. I know Ms. Holly Fiock very well from working with her in various capacities. In this letter, I would like to specifically discuss her work as a co-instructor or assisting instructor.

As a graduate of the Learning Design Technology masters program, Ms. Holly Fiock assisted me in teaching EDCI 531, Learning Theories for Instructional Design, during Spring 2016, a face to face class.

First, Ms. Fiock was instrumental in reviewing the original syllabus for improvement, based on the previous experiences she had in taking the class as an online course. She has strong motivation to make learning engaging and effective, while always ensuring high efficiency from both the instructors' and students' point of view. Her support in tightening up the course was invaluable.

Second, she was helpful in making the class discussions have more depth. As a practicing instructional designer in the field, her insights were very much appreciated by the students. She was insightful but funny and clever at the same time, and that made it even more motivating and engaging for the students.

Third, Ms. Fiock also helped with grading in the course. She would review assignments, such as case studies that students wrote, and provide feedback. Most of the times we would agree on the evaluations of the assignments. When we disagreed, she provided thoughtful reasons why she disagreed, and that was very helpful as well.

In conclusion, Ms. Fiock showed very strong potential to be an excellent instructor, she would maintain a great class even on her own. She is well liked due to her genuine concern for her students, and she is highly organized and creative in the planning and delivery of the course.

Sincerely,

Sunnie Lee Watson, Ph.D.
